What cookies are

Cookies and similar technologies help the website remember settings, maintain security, understand how pages work, and, if you consent, use analytics and marketing tools. Consent settings are stored in your browser.

Required cookies

Required cookies are used for core website operation, storing your cookie banner choice, protecting against technical errors, and keeping pages available. They cannot be disabled through the website interface because the site may not work correctly without them.

Analytics

Analytics cookies help us understand which pages are opened, which buttons are used, and where errors occur. They are enabled only after your consent. You can decline analytics in the cookie banner.

Marketing

Marketing cookies may be used to measure advertising performance and configure advertising audiences. They are enabled only after your consent and are not required for access to the website.

How to change your choice

You can clear cookies and localStorage for the website in your browser settings; the cookie banner will then appear again. You may also restrict cookies at browser level, but some website functions may work differently.
